

JOIN THE FIGHT FOR FOSTER KIDS!

The Moodsters Children's Foundation is honored to announce a new partnership with Angel Studios to join in the fight for foster children and their foster families. For too long, the plight of foster kids has been virtually ignored by the world. A difficult start in life, coupled with tremendous loss, grief, or trauma, leaves these children particularly vulnerable. They need protective strategies to help them survive in difficult situations. They long for loving, supportive families and safe, stable homes. They deserve hope.

For over 35 years, The Moodsters Children's Foundation has served vulnerable children—including orphans, refugees, and survivors of war—in the U.S. and around the world. We have partnered with the Yale Center for Emotional Intelligence to provide evidence-based resources that promote the healthy development of children's emotional well-being. We help kids understand the connection between their thoughts, feelings, and behaviors. By developing kid-friendly skills to address their emotions, children in crisis are better able to handle their worries, anxiety, and emotional pain.

This July Fourth, an army of hope is assembling for kids in theaters everywhere. Angel Studios' latest film, Sound of Hope: The Story of Possum Trot, boldly reveals what children in the foster system endure. Following in the groundbreaking wake of Sound of Freedom and The Chosen, this film doesn't shy away from the many ways in which these children suffer—and the many ways in which people can come together to end their suffering. This heartfelt film chronicles the true story of a compassionate community that rallied together to stand up for the most vulnerable among us: our children.

A new partnership between The Moodsters Children's Foundation and Angel Studios will create multiple opportunities to raise awareness of this crisis. Plans include recruiting new foster families, offering support to current foster parents, and serving these children in their emotional development so that they can heal, grow, and thrive. We're calling on people to join us in a movement to support kids and families. We're calling on people who know that love never gives up.

The Moodsters Children's Foundation is honored to be invited to help shine a spotlight on the plight of foster children and to strengthen children and families. Every child is one caring grown-up away from becoming a success story. Together, we can send a loud message: There should never be a child without a home.

Join us.
